Cutting Through the Pet Insurance Red Tape

Most people first hear about pet insurance during a visit to the veterinarian's office. The idea of getting coverage to cover your pet's medical costs is worth considering, especially if you have a pet with a chronic illness. But where can you go for more information?

This week's feature article addresses whether or not you should purchase pet health insurance, and our top ten provides a handy reference for what to look for if you do decide to get that policy. And if after reading both of those you're still hungry for more information, check out our Pet Insurance Center.
